

Rockwell Collins and FlightSafety roll out Pro Line Fusion® avionics training for Bombardier Challenger 604 operators

Rockwell Collins is working with FlightSafety on a comprehensive training program for Bombardier Challenger 604 operators to prepare them for forthcoming upgrades from Pro Line 4™ avionics to Pro Line Fusion®.

- Training available at locations in Delaware and Arizona
- Upgrade certification expected by year end

GENEVA, Switzerland (May 30, 2018) – Rockwell Collins and FlightSafety International have announced a new training program for Bombardier Challenger 604 operators to accompany their Pro Line 4™ to Pro Line Fusion® integrated avionics system upgrade.

“We’re highly familiar with the Challenger 604 customer base as the current training provider for Pro Line 4 equipment, and we’ll be bringing this knowledge and expertise – along with our experience training other operators using Pro Line Fusion – to this new program,” said David Davenport, executive vice president at FlightSafety.

The training program, which will be provided at FlightSafety’s locations in Wilmington, Delaware, and Tucson, Arizona, features Rockwell Collins’ simulation and training software derived from certified aircraft software. This software solution will be combined with interactive desk top trainers to support pilot familiarization training.
